CAREFUL! SCAMMERS ARE EVERYWHERE!

Members 1st Credit Union urges you to be careful and remain alert. Reports of fraud and scam attempts are increasing every day. Scammers are posing as well-known companies, financial institutions, local police departments, and even toll companies. They are trained to use highly convincing phone calls, text messages, and emails. They use these to trick people into sharing sensitive information or to send money.

AARP and other publications are publishing a lot of useful information to help you be aware of the things/red flags to look for:

Am I being asked to send money or share sensitive information such as account numbers, login credentials, passcodes or payment verification, even if they seem to come from a legitimate source.

JUNE 30, 2026

THE HEARTBEAT

Did the message come out of the blue?

Unexpected calls, emails, texts, social media or pop-ups are common red flags.

Am I being asked to pay in an unusual or specific way? Requests involving gift cards, cryptocurrency, payment apps or unfamiliar websites are warning signs.

Am I being told to keep it a secret or coached on what to say? Fraudsters often instruct victims to lie or withhold information from others, including their family members, friends, and their bank.

Am I being pressured to act immediately or threatened? Urgency and fear are classic scam tactics, such as threats of arrest, account freezes or legal action.

Is someone asking to remotely access my computer or accounts? Legitimate organizations will not ask you to log in or share access while on the phone. They will never ask you for passwords or one time passcodes via unsolicited calls, texts or emails.

Does something feel off? Trust your instincts. If it doesn't feel right, stop and verify.

What to do: Pause before responding to unexpected requests; verify independently by calling your credit union or the company. Use a trusted phone number, talk with a trusted colleague, friend, or family member if you're unsure; and report suspicious activity to your credit union or bank immediately.

Stay informed and share this information. We can help protect ourselves, our coworkers, and our communities from becoming victims.
